TAKING THE VEIL.

Just there the turbid river assumes even more than its wonted angry appearance and in great eddies, miniature whirlpools and seething currents seems to be undergoing some terrible convulsion of pain at being confined between the barriers of the levees. Immediately above and below this sweeping bend it moved along with something like majesty in its smooth, broad surface, and creates an impression of its Titanic power perhaps far greater than where it bubbles and boils, twists and turns in discomfiture at being forced to change its straight, onward rush to the sea to conform to the idiosyncrasies of the irregular banks. Here and there the branches of partially submerged willows were swaying to and fro moved by the impetuous current, and rafts of driftwood, gathered by the eddy from the great masses floating down, kept up their slow revolution some twenty yards from the bank. Every little while portions of this confused aggregation of trees, branches, twigs, fence rails and other flotsam, always seen in high water on the Mississippi, would be caught by the main current and go sweeping down as if glad to part company with the heterogenous mass it had just left. Deadman's Eddy was known in those days by all the steamboatmen, and few of them cared to put the noses of their boats into it on a dark night, for it had a reputation that was anything but inviting. Numbers of boats had their wheels disabled by the accumulated drift, and one or two had been snagged within the boundaries of this ominously named portion of the river.

Opposite Deadman's Eddy, embowered in a grove of stately live oaks, stood the large plantation house of the Cavellier family, a roomy, comfortable building belonging to the Creole style of architecture that probably affords more shade and ventilation to the square foot than any other known to southern climates.

It stood about 200 yards back from the levee, and the intervening space was laid out in parterres of roses and palms, camelias and sweet olive.

Neither the quiet charm of the landscape, the delicious atmosphere of perfume, nor the ravishing pearl shower of bird notes produced anything like the effect on a visitor to this place that the queenly beauty of Marguerite Cavellier did. A brunette of 22, her eyes had set more guitars thrumming in bachelor's quarters along the river than any other belle ever known thereabouts, and her face had flooded the table of the editor of L'Abeille, in New Orleans, with hundreds of poems, some of them written, it must be admitted, in questionable French, but all warm, passionate and devoted. She was tall, with the figure of some of those delicately chiseled Grecian statues, and possessed of a manner that was so perfectly natural and free from constraint it left with everybody the impression that they had been intimate friends of hers for years. She did not know what guile or duplicity was, and with the naivete of a child would reprove or compliment the action regardless of any thought of the actor. Every negro picaninny on the plantation worshiped her with a blind idolatry as something entirely supernatural and not of this earth. Her voice was low and musical, and when her great black eyes were fixed on the listener the effect was almost magnetic. The French word svelte applied to her most appropriately. To see her on horseback in the morning galloping along the river road, followed by her gayly-dressed negro boy was a sight well worth the trouble of early rising, at least so thought Edouard de Montpre, the struggling young attorney of the parish. No matter how late he may have been pouring over his books endeavoring to fix in his memory precedents and leading cases he never missed his promenade on the levee just at that hour when the young equestrienne came cantering along. A lifted hat and deferential bow was always paid for by a bewitching smile and wave of the hand, and the lawyer for the rest of that day saw that face peering into his own over the back of his Hennen's digest, and out of the panels of his not too well filled bookcase. On his father's death city merchants had sold out the Grand Bosquet plantation under many mortgages, and the only surviving son was left with an athletic form, good disposition and excellent education as the only legacies from the Montpre estate. Everybody along the coast, as the banks of the Mississippi river was called by the residents in those days, esteemed the young man and applauded him in his efforts to re-establish the paternal name.

He visited the Cavelliers once or twice a month, but his self-pride imagined that his receptions there were not as cordial on the part of the venerable host as they might have been, and this he attributed to his own modest purse.

It would be pleasant writing to tell how the friendship between the lawyer and Marguerite ripened into an intimacy that soon developed into a pure and deep love. The Cavellier family, although opposing De Montpre's frequent visits, were all of them under the sweet influence of Marguerite, and could refuse her nothing.

"Edouard," she said, "was so different from the other callers, and she never saw him without learning something—he was so gifted and knew so much."

And so it was within a year after her return from the convent they were engaged, Mons. Cavellier agreeing to give the young man the Belle Colombe place, on the other side of the river, for a start after marriage.

In the midst of that beautiful season of contemplated love and betrothal, the old plantation house was startled by the report brought from New Orleans that the state of Louisiana had seceded, and troops were being raised for a war. The news spread rapidly. People that hitherto had taken little or no part in political affairs began to discuss the situation. Col. Lafferranderie, an old army officer had established his headquarters at the Cut-off postoffice, not far distant from the Cavellier place, and young men were enrolling in scores. The conversation around the dinner tables now was devoted to the new artillery company of Capt. So-and-so, or the splendid chasseurs a-pied of young Molaison of the adjoining parish. Edouard Montpre caught the infection. Forty young men tendered him their captaincy, and in three weeks he and his men were on a steamboat bound for the Crescent City.

The parting of Edouard and Marguerite was most tender and affecting. The men of the company, long afterward, around the camp fires in the mountains of Virginia, frequently talked of it, and not a little of the love and solicitude for their captain was due to their knowledge that he had left behind the most loving and noble girl in the state.

The boat blew a long and discordant whistle, as if impatient of the delay caused by L'e Montpre's leave-taking. He realized that the supreme moment had come. He bent tenderly over her and whispered, "Ma cherie, I will be with you soon again. It may all be over in a month. Look for my return on every boat. Think of me often, my darling. It is for you and our people I go." He kissed her, muttered a tremulous "Adieu," and started down the steps. Marguerite stood motionless for a moment and then sank to the floor.

Assisted by her father and an old negro nurse she reached the levee just as the boat was backing out. As long as Deadman's Eddy was in sight the flutter of a white handkerchief could be discerned against the background of green willows growing on the bank.

Boats passed and repassed. Sometimes they would stop near the Cavellier place, sometimes they would go on, but none of them bore her lover back to her. She waited weeks, months, years. Each day that figure in white could be seen seated in the shade of a live oak in front of the old plantation house, keeping its watch for that boat that never came.

The Federal pickets near Culpepper court house, Virginia, were surprised just after daybreak by the appearance of a man staggering along alone, without rifle or accoutrement. The mud on his dress completely hid the color of his uniform. His face was bloody and he reeled like a drunken man. There had been a sharp skirmish near there the evening before, and it was thought the solitary figure coming through the misty woods was some Union soldier left on the field who had recovered sufficiently to get up. The men went out to meet him and were surprised to discover that the unfortunate fellow was a Confederate, and a captain at that. He had received a ball in the center of the forehead, which had fractured but had not penetrated the skull. He could not talk intelligently, and his movements showed that his brain lacked co-ordination. The expression had gone out of his eyes, and his countenance was pale and wan. He was escorted to the rear and placed in a hospital in Washington City, from which he recovered from the wound, but the pressure of a particle of bone on the brain left him lacking his memory. He could tell nothing of his past. It was as if it had never existed.

When the war closed he was released from prison. He knew not where to go, for he could not recall from whence he came. An old gentleman of southern proclivities gave him employment as a gardener in the neighborhood of Washington, and he brought to his new position a strong frame, willing heart and happy disposition. He was looked upon with much curiosity by all the neighborhood, for his bearing and features showed he came from patrician blood.

It seemed as if all nature's minstrelsy had joined to greet the beautiful morning. The tinkling of cow bells in the pastures behind the convent, usually the first notes of approaching dawn, were silenced by the twitter of birds in the great pecan trees. Mocking birds and oriole, the cardinal and pape, whistled so cheerily that even the blackbirds, half dozing on last year's cornstalks out in the fields, turned their heads first on one side and then on the other mediatively, to listen to the joyous outburst. Inside the chapel of the Ursuline convent there was gathered a silent congregation, mostly of ladies. The yellow light of this spring morning poured through the windows, adding something of the supernatural to the appearance of the interior. The tender, tremulous notes of the organ, the almost weeping voices of the choir, and the agitated tones of the good priest visibly affected all present.

In front of the altar knelt a queenly figure robed in the habiliments of a bride. From that hour she was to become a bride of the Lord, and henceforth as a nun, to devote herself to the obligation of a recluse. For her the world was to be dead forever. There is always something inexpressibly sad in the ceremony of taking the veil, and in this case circumstances made it unusually touching. A young lady endowed with wealth, beauty and everything that could make a home happy passed out the chapel door never more to look upon a worldly life again. There were few dry eyes in the little building, and even until to-day many recall the morning when that beautiful young woman gave up the name her family knew her by and was rechristened Sister Ursule. Hope deferred had made the heart sick, and the world had lost its sweetness for her.

That very morning, in the operating ward of the Charity hospital, that skillful surgeon, Dr. Stone, was performing a most delicate operation. A poor fellow, shortly before arrived on a New York steamer, had applied for admission to the hospital, suffering from neuralgia. He complained of his head, and after a careful examination the cicatrix of a wound in the forehead was discovered. The patient told of his lack of memory and could not give anything of his history. The doctors diagnosed the case as one of pressure on the brain by a portion of the frontal bone, and resolved to trephine and remove the cause of the trouble. The operation was successful, and the patient was removed to his cot in another ward.

The next morning he had fully recovered from the effects of chloroform. He called the nurse to him. He asked where he was, and was told. A new light shone in his eyes. He sent for the house surgeon. Everything had come back to him. The vanished years of obliviousness dawned upon his re-awakened memory. He remembered his parting on that front gallery, the war, the skirmish, and his affianced wife.

He begged the doctor to send for his friends in the city. Surely some of them could be found.

On the third day old Zenon Cavellier visited the hospital. In the man with a bandage about his head he recognized one he had known five years before. The sick man turned over on his bed and looked at the visitor. He raised himself on his elbow and his lips moved. "Where is Marguerite?" were his first words.

The old gentleman hesitated, but the invalid begged so hard. At last, with tears in his eyes, the visitor answered: "She has taken the veil at the convent, and has left the world."

The head dropped back, the eye closed, the hand fell listless on the white sheet. The nurse hurried to the surgeon. There was a rapid movement of feet on the sanded floor, and the gray-haired physician appeared. He shook his head sadly. "'Tis too bad," said he; "You have spoiled that operation. Heart disease. That did the work! Some shock to his nerves, eh?"

The driftwood still is carried round and round, in the currents of Deadman's Eddy. The orange trees put on their bridal crowns each spring, as before, and the mocking-birds still warble their orisons in the tall pecan trees, but never more will that queenly figure in white be seen on the broad veranda of the old plantation house. Never again will the young attorney wait on the road in the early morn for the coming of that beautiful equestrienne. From the turbid eddies of life the one has floated into the harbor of religion, the other drifted out into the measureless sea of eternity.—"C. E. W." in Times-Democrat.

SELECTIONS.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense
Lie in three words—health, peace and competence. —Pope.

Patient forbearance and sweet cheerfulness,
And gentle charity that loves to bless—
To hide all faults as soon as they appear.
Without such stores, bought by no golden price,
Winter may freeze the human blood to ice.
—Caroline May.

Some grave their wrongs on marble; he, more just,
Stoop'd down serene, and wrote them on the dust;
Trod under foot, the sport of every wind,
Swept from the earth, and lost from his mind;
There, secret in the grave, he bade them lie,
And grieved they could not escape the Almighty's eye.
—Dr. S. Madden.

HOW DOES THE BRAIN WORK?

The True Answer to the Question—A Series of Co-Ordinated Movements.

How, then, does the mechanism of the brain really act? I believe the true answer to this question is the one most fully given by M. Ribot and never yet completely accepted by English psychologists. It acts, for the most part, as a whole; or, at least, even the simplest idea or mental act of any sort is a complex of processes involving the most enormously varied brain elements. Instead of dog being located somewhere in one particular cell of the brain, dog is an idea, audible, visible, legible, pronounceable, requiring for different modes of his perception or production the co-operation of an enormous number of separate cells, fibers and ganglia.

Let us take an illustration from a kindred case. How clumsy and awkward a supposition it would be if we were to imagine there was a muscle of dancing, and a muscle of walking, and a muscle of rowing, and a muscle of cricketing, and a muscle for the special practice of the noble art of lawn-tennis! Dancing is not a single act, but a complex series of co-ordinated movements, implying for its proper performance the action of almost all the muscles of the body in different proportions, and in relatively fixed amounts and manners. Even a waltz is complicated enough; but when to a quadrille or a set of lancers, everybody can see at once that the figure consists of so many steps forward and so many back; of a bow here, and a twirl there; of hands now extended both together, and now held out one at a time in rapid succession, and so forth, throughout all the long complicated series. A quadrille in short, is not a name for one act, for a single movement of a single muscle, but for many acts of the whole organism, all arranged in a fixed sequence.—Popular Science Monthly.

Beware of the Hoo-Dooed Store-Rooms.

"There is one of the unlucky places of this town," said a renting agent, as he rode along Madison street in a horse car. "I wouldn't want to guarantee to give 5 cents for all the money that will ever be made in that store-room. Within the last year four or five men have tried their hands at running a restaurant there and have failed. The room is now vacant again. I never knew a man to succeed there. At least a score of tenants have been in there since the building was put up, and not one of them has made a dollar. Even a saloon failed. On either side of it business of all kinds is prosperous, but nothing goes there.

"That isn't the only place of the kind I know of in Chicago. There are storerooms in which I would not start a business if I could get rent free and a subsidy to boot. They are unlucky spots, and a man had better keep out of them. Am I superstitious? Not at all. It isn't that. The unfortunate result of all enterprises started in these places is due to a trait of human nature—to a business law—that trade naturally avoids locations where sheriff's notices and to rent cards are frequently displayed. It isn't superstition, but business. The owner of any one of these fated stores could have well afforded to give rent free and paid out money besides if he could thereby have averted the reputation which his house now has. My advice to any man starting a new business would be to pay some attention to the reputation for luck which the store-room he intends taking has got, just as the prudent man does to the reputation of the partner with whom he joins fortunes.—Chicago Herald.

How Mme. Cavalazzi Liberated Rome.

The event of my life was the part I undertook in the liberation of Rome. One day while in Rome a young officer belonging to Garibaldi's staff called upon me and asked my aid in inciting an insurrection for the purpose of delivering the city over to his general. The plans were made, and the next night the place of the harlequin in the ballet was filled by the young officer, who wore a rich green costume. My bodice and skirt was of bright red. At the conclusion of an effective dance I fell back upon my partner in the regular ballet fashion, my red dress and white skirts resting against the green costume of the harlequin, thus showing the national colors which were then prohibited on the stage. The effect was electrical; and as the curtain fell the spectators rushed into the street in the wildest excitement. In a short time the city was aroused and Garibaldi entered it in triumph.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Troupe of Italian Singers.

A troupe of Italian opera singers are about as great an inconsistency as a flock of untrained animals. The reporters for the press constantly aver that I have financial reason for changing an opera at the last moment. If it were only known what a dealer in macaroni-eating singers has to contend with, all this talk would be stopped. Upon the slightest pretense prime donne will refuse to appear, and in figuring what we shall do we have to select an opera that will not have in its cast one of the soloists who has sung the night before. Most of our best singers refuse to appear twice in succession, and we are compelled to do the best we can.—Col. Mapleson.

They Had Fish for Dinner.

The member for West Algoma tells a good story about a species of sturgeon from forty to sixty pounds in weight, which is peculiar to Rainy river and lake. On a visit which he paid last summer to a settlement on the river, he had occasion to visit a young bachelor, who, with true backwoods hospitality, insisted that he should stay for dinner. Mr. Conmee seated himself and watched the preparations of his entertainer.

First he set down his home-made bread on the table, with tin mugs for the tea, and then put a big pot full of water over the fire. When the water came to the boiling point he infused the tea and set it aside. Then he seized a gaff about six feet feet long, stepped outside to the river's edge, which was not over ten paces distant, and returned in three minutes with a sturgeon kicking on the end of his gaff, part of which was soon cut off and transferred to the pot of boiling water to be cooked for dinner. This is the usual thing up there. They always have the water boiling before they go to catch the fish, and they use only a common gaff.—Toronto World.

THE JAPANESE PEOPLE IN 1871.

The Phenomenal Colored Servant—The Girded Sword—Temper of the Weapon.

Perry's visit to Japan was as complete an epoch for the people of that country as Columbus' to the native of America. The latter disappeared under the alien visitation. Dai Nippon has profited by it. Events are dated in Japan from the appearance of Perry just as we commence an epoch from the birth of the Saviour. The Tenno lived in the Naisu-Maru, part of the Oyeno or fortified palace grounds of the old Tycoon. Horticulturally, I remember, these grounds were perfect, great camellia trees, beautiful flowers of all kinds, handsome drives and the gardening culture. The inclosure was moated and invulnerable to any attack devoid of artillery, sheltered and guarded against any ancient form of warfare. A great covered central gate—the O-te-go-mon, gate of the great hand—was the one we entered by. Shrines, grotesque monuments and queer tiled buildings were in plenty, and men and officers, but no women. Not a female face was seen in or about any of the official residences, except at the entertainment at the Homa-goten, Sawa's palace, when singing and dancing girls gave an exhibition during the evening. Japan is changing, so that I presume in a few years all the old will have disappeared and with it much of rare historical and artistic interest.

When I was in the country, in the interior a foreigner was a curiosity, equal to the first Chinaman or Jap seen by us here. On a visit made to the summit of Fuji-yama in the summer of 1871 I went to the famous hot springs at Hakone; at nearly every tea-house our party was as much of an exhibition as Jo-Jo or the woman with big feet is here. A colored servant, dark as Erebus, whom I had with me, was a phenomenal subject to the innocent Japs. The men and women would come up to him, try to rub the black off with their hands and be surprised they could not, and laugh over it with the contagious and hilarious glee the people so much enjoy. My watch would have been a passport anywhere into the interior, as they never tired looking "at the wheels go round." Insolence and suspicion was never met with among the common folk, but only from the Samurai. These fellows are born brawlers and when flushed with saki were dangerous. All wore swords then, now done away with. They set great store by this weapon, and a Japanese noble often wore one worth $1,000. The occupation—alone of all the trades—of swordsmith in old Japan was an honorable one and the members of the guild of gentle blood. Iyeyasu, founder of the last dynasty of Shoguns, left a motto that "the girded sword was the living soul of the Samurai." When forging the edge of the blade the ancient swordsmith put on the robes of the Kuge class or nobles of the Mi-ka-do's court.

The temper of these trenchant weapons excels any Toledo trusty. I recall a visit Iwa-kuru and his official family paid the late Admiral John Rodgers on the flagship Colorado. While in the cabin Admiral Rodgers—Fighting Jack Rodgers he was called in the service, to distinguish him from the present Admiral C. R. P. Rodgers, whose sailor name is Chesterfield Rodgers, on account of the urbanity with which he could ask the deck officer to take a reef in the topsails or set a lower stun'sail—was showing the Japanese San-jo-dai-jin the mettle of a sword presented to him by the emperor of Russia, when it snapped like a whipcord. Iwa-kuru took his long katana, heavily mounted and rich in cunning metal work—probably an heirloom in his family for centuries—bent it hither and thither and almost tied a bowknot in it. Our admiral was not a little chagrined at the bad behavior of his Russian weapon. Afterwards, however, the San-jo-dai-jin sent him a superb native sword, probably equal to his own in temper. I remember hearing one of the court officers say that it was not considered a good sword that would not at one blow cleve through the dead bodies of three men. Young noblemen were wont to try their maiden swords by bribing the headsman to use them at public executions, and fierce, inhuman Yakonins tested theirs not infrequently in the old times on dogs and lazars on the public highway.—Ex-Naval Officer in Philadelphia Times.

Action of Acids on the Saliva.

The influence of acids in retarding or arresting salivary digestion is further of importance in the dietetic use of pickels, vinegar, salads, and acid fruits. In the case of vinegar it was found that 1 part in 5,000 sensibly retarded this process, a proportion of 1 in 1,000 rendered it very slow, and 1 in 500 arrested it completely; so that when acid salads are taken together with bread the effect of the acid is to prevent any salivary digestion of the bread, a matter of little moment to a person with a vigorous digestion, but to a feeble dyspeptic one of some importance. There is a very widespread belief that drinking vinegar is an efficacious means of avoiding getting fat, and this popular belief would appear from

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, APRIL 2, 1886.

The bill introduced in Congress to increase the rate of postage of fourth class matter has failed in the House.

Secretary Bayard was again afflicted last week by the death of his brother-in-law. Afflictions never comes singly.

The total number of postmasters of the fourth class removed from March 4, 1885 to March 3, 1886 was 8,635. Of these 938 are in Pennsylvania.

It has recently been made known that Col. Nutt who was killed by Dukes at Uniontown a few years ago, was short in his accounts as cashier of the State Treasury $42,500. It is said to have been lost in oil speculation.

The Philadelphia Press which has been posing as the friend of the laboring man, is being boycotted in some sections because it does not employ members of the Typographical Union in its office.

The Senate committee on public buildings and grounds has authorized a favorable report to be made on Senator Morrill's bill appropriating $300,000 for the erection of an extension to the White House.

The investigation at the McAllisterville Soldiers Orphan school has developed not only that the children are not properly fed and clothed, but that gross immoralities have been practiced there. The Governor has completed his visits to these schools, and will soon make known the result. Some startling disclosures may be expected.

Keeper Laverty of the New Jersey state prison is now on trial by the senate of that state under articles of impeachment. He is charged with improper conduct and criminal intimacy with female prisoners, and a number of them have given very damaging testimony against him. One of the witnesses named Minnie Schaefer swore that Laverty is the father of her infant, born since she left prison. She said that Laverty seduced her under a promise that he would procure a pardon for her, and that he subsequently promised to pay her $1600 but failed to do so.

It is truly wonderful what modern medical science can accomplish. Last week an operation was performed in a New York hospital that is almost without parallel. The patient was a female about twenty-five years of age, and one of her limbs had become diseased by injuries to the bone received from a fall. She was placed under the influence of chloroform, her leg was cut open, the diseased bones sawed off and taken out, and the healthy bones connected by a silver wire, and the flesh sewed up again. The operation took two hours, and it is expected that the patient will regain the use of her leg, which will be in no way disfigured by the treatment.

The Philadelphia Times thinks it is possible to overdo the monument business. When a great soldier, statesman or philanthropist dies, it is well enough for the public to commemorate his life and deeds by the erection of a suitable monument over him, but when an appeal is made to the people for funds to raise a costly tomb or statue for every "good fellow" who shuffles off this mortal coil, be he actor, politican or what not, it is going to far. The funds had far better be devoted to the wants of his family, or to some charitable object, where they will be of more value than simply to please the eye.

THE LABOR TROUBLES.

All over the country the spirit of striking has struck the laboring classes. The railroad troubles in the west have thrown thousands of men out of employment, stopped the running of freight trains, and thereby brought untold losses upon the business men, as well as on the employees themselves. The cause of this difficulty was the discharge of a single member of the Knights of Labor, and the object was to force his reinstatement, and not for higher wages. In this matter the organization known as the Knights of Labor has taken the bit in their own mouths, and are acting against their own principle and contrary to the advice and wishes of their chief officers. Master Workman T. V. Powderly, the head of the organization has written a letter, in which he condemns the strike, and urges moderation. He covers the whole subject when he says that "while an injury to one is the concern of all it is not wise to injure all for the sake of one." The document is long, but he sums the situation up in his closing lines as follows:

"I write this circular to lay before the order the exact condition of things. I am neither physically nor mentally capable of peforming the work required of me. I am willing to do my part, but must not be asked to maintain a false position before the world any longer. One of two things must take place: either the local district assemblies of the order must obey its laws or I must be permitted to resign from a position which obliges me to play one part before the public and another to our members. I say to the world that the Knights of Labor do not approve of or encourage strikes, and in one day dispatches come to me to come to Troy, New York; Manchester, New Hampshire; Chicago, Cincinnati, Lynchburg, Va.; Springfield, Ohio, and Montreal, Canada. It is impossible for human nature to stand the strain any longer. I must have the assistance of the order or my most earnest efforts will fail. Will I have it? If so strikes must be avoided; boycotts must be avoided. Those who boast must be checked by their assemblies. No move must be made until the court of last resort has been appealed to. Threats of violence must not be made.

Politicians must be hushed up or driven out. Obedience to the laws of Knighthood must have preference over those of any other order.

If these things are done the next five years will witness the complete emancipation of mankind from the curse of monopoly in our members. We require secrecy, obedience, assistance, patience and courage. If with these aids you strengthen my hands I will continue in the work. If you do not desire to assist me in this way, then select a man better qualified to obey your will and I will retire in his favor."

After occupying much valuable time in the discussion of the Edmunds resolutions concerning the production of papers relating to the removal and appointment of officers by the President, the Senate finally adopted them last Friday by a majority of one vote. The resolutions virtually amount to nothing, and the discussion was opened by the republican senators simply in the hope of making some political capital for themselves. In this they were worsted by the President, and they can now proceed to public business.

The alleged discovery of M. Pasteur, the French chemist, that hydrophobia can be prevented by inoculation, has received a severe shock by the death of a Russian patient who had been bitten by a mad wolf. The Newark children who were sent over to Paris a few months ago to be treated by M. Pasteur have none of them shown any symptoms of rabies, but it is said now that the dog that bit them was not mad. The Russian's death occurred in nineteen days after the wound was inflicted, and seven days after Pasteur began his treatment, so that the value of inoculation as a cure for this disease is not yet satisfactorily established. But as there are exceptions to all rules, and as the Russian was very severely bitten by the wolf a part of his jaw being torn away, and a piece of the tooth of the animal left inbedded in his cheek, the failure ought not to be taken as finally conclusive that the remedy has no value whatever. urther experiment may prove its efficacy.

Indiana county liquor-dealers are murmuring louder than ever. Judge Harry White has again committed the wholesale refusal act in dealing with the license question and the hotel-keepers are naturally anxious to know how long this thing is going to last.

Judge White's extraordinary refusal of licenses is based on the general law of 1867, which provides that "it shall be lawful for said Court to hear remonstrances against the application and in all cases to refuse the same whenever, in the opinion of the Court, having due regard to the number and character of the petitioners for and against such application, such license is not necessary for the accommodation of the traveling public and entertainment of strangers and travelers." His opponents argue that he is inconsistent in making this law apply to Indiana county, which is covered by a local license law passed in 1866, because he has ruled that the penalties imposed by a later general law cannot be substituted for the penalties imposed by the local law in question, which applied only to Blair, Indiana and Westmoreland counties.

But whether the general law of 1867 applies to these three counties or not, it certainly applies to the other counties of the State. It seems to assume that stimulating drinks are necessary to the traveling public, while Judge White assumes the contrary. The law may be right and White wrong, or White may be right and the law wrong, but he is on the bench to enforce the law as it is, not as it ought to be or as he privately thinks it ought to be. This is the reason why the thousands who agree with him as to the fact disagree with him as to his right to make and unmake law.—Times.

SOLDIERS' ORPHANS SCHOOLS.

The Philadelphia Record, which has taken the lead in the exposure of the infamous mismanagement of these schools, and which will and certainly should result in an entire re-organization of the system, if it do not break up and close them altogether, proposes in an editorial on Saturday last, to close the schools and transfer the pupils to the Normal schools. There is no doubt such transfer ought to be made, and we sincerely hope it may be.

The credit of this suggestion, however, is due to Col. John G. Freeze, of this place, who, five years ago, drew a bill for that purpose—file of the House No. 546, session of 1881, which was read in place by Hon. Mr. Knittle, January 25, 1881. The bill was reported with a negative recommendation; but time, the avenger, proves it was right. We hope the Record will continue its good work.

FOR THE BLOOD

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Combining IRON with PURE VEGETABLE TONICS, quickly and completely CLEANSES and ENRICHES THE BLOOD. Quickens the action of the Liver and Kidneys. Clears the complexion, makes the skin smooth. It does not injure the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—ALL OTHER IRON MEDICINES DO. Physicians and Druggists everywhere recommend it.

DR. N. S. RUGGLES, of Marion, Mass., says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters as a valuable tonic for enriching the blood, and removing all dyspeptic symptoms. It does not hurt the teeth."

DR. R. M. DELZELL, Reynolds, Ind., says: "I have prescribed Brown's Iron Bitters in cases of anemia and blood diseases, also when a tonic was needed, and it has proved thoroughly satisfactory."

MR. WM. BYRNE, 2836 Mary St., New Orleans, La., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters relieved me in a case of blood poisoning, and I heartily commend it to those needing a blood purifier."

MRS. W. W. MONAHAN, Tuscumbia, Ala. says: "I have been troubled from childhood with impure blood and eruption on my face—two bottles of Brown's Iron Bitters effected a perfect cure. I cannot speak too highly of this valuable medicine."

Benjamin Beaver of Mill Grove was in town Friday.

H. A. Sweppenheiser of Lime Ridge gave us a pleasant call Saturday.

Mr. G. W. Bates is again able to be out, after a severe illness of several months.

Rev. F. B. Riddle, the new pastor of the M. E. Church, preached here for the first time on Sunday last.

Mrs. Elisha Hess and daughter Christine, of Montgomery Station, visited friends in this place a few days this week.

Mr. John Brofee, Mt. Carmel's new postmaster, was in town on Monday, and was warmly greeted by his many friends.

Miss Mildred Knorr, who is attending Vassar College, was at home on a vacation for a week, returning on Wednesday.

Mr. H. W. Buckingham has returned from Philadelphia where he has been attending medical lectures at Jefferson College.

Mr. A. M. White and family of Orange township started for Ohio on Tuesday, where they will reside. Mr White has purchased a farm of 160 acres near Weston in that state.

Mrs. Jane Lowry and Miss Maggie Lowry of Washington, D. C., are visiting at Rev. A. Brittain's. Mrs. Lowry is Mr. Brittain's only surviving sister. She was born at Lightstreet, and left there fifty-four years ago, and this is her first visit here since that time. She will go to Grand Rapids, Mich., next week.

Dr. C. W. Amerman and family moved from Orangeville to Greenwood, Sussex Co., Delaware, on Monday last. The Doctor has resided at Orangeville for the past thirteen years, and during that time has enjoyed a large practice, extending all through the upper end of the county. He has acquired an enviable reputation as a careful and skillful physician, and his numerous patients will deeply regret the loss of his services. Aside from his ability as a physician, he is a gentleman of rare social qualities, and he leaves many friends behind him in this county. We wish him success in his new home.

The Spring term of the Orangeville Academy will open on Monday, April 5.

Call and see the new styles for Spring and Summer at D. LOWENBERG'S.

A three-year-old son of William Metz died last Friday morning and was buried on Sunday.

James M. Long took charge of the Orangeville Hotel on the 1st. He will make a popular landlord.

Are you going to paper your house this Spring? You can suit yourself at George A. Clark's book store.

Just received—a large line of white shirts, a marvel of cheapness, at 43 cts. each. D. Lowenberg.

Charles A Shuman has been appointed postmaster at Beaver Valley. He is a good Democrat, and will make an excellent official.

The right place to get your Spring suit made up in city style, full satisfaction guaranteed, is at the popular store of D. Lowenberg, the merchant tailor of Columbia county.

The newest style, the largest stock, the lowest price can always be had at D. Lowenberg's.

James Reilly has moved his pool and billiard tables to Knorr & Wintersteen's hall. He has four tables with all the necessary fixtures, in good shape.

Dennis & Moyer have dissolved partnership, and the barber business heretofore conducted by them will be continued at the same place by Wm. Dennis.

The Spring term at the Normal school opened on Monday with a large number of students. The attendance promises to be greater than ever, in a few weeks, when the county schools close.

The Greenwood Seminary, at Millville, will begin the Spring term on Monday, April 19, 1886. Students preparing for college will find it to their advantage to correspond with the Principal, A. L. Tustin.

Most remarkable changes of weather have been experienced during the past week. Sunday last the thermometer rose to about 65 degrees, while on Monday morning it dropped again almost to the freezing point.

We are glad to notice the appointment of John Brofee of Mt. Carmel as the postmaster of that place. He was formerly of this county where he has many friends and has been a subscriber of this paper for many years.

T. L. Murphy, a weather prophet who has been surprisingly correct in his predictions all winter, now writes to the New York Tribune his opinion for the spring season: "I prophesy remarkable fine spring and early summer such as have not been seen in many a year."

The Spring term of the Normal School opened Monday morning, under the most favorable circumstances in the history of the school. Every available place is occupied with boarders. Should the increase in this school continue as in the past, a new dormitory will be necessary in a few years.

There will be a meeting of the teachers, officers and Sunday school workers of Bloomsburg, on Tuesday, April 6—morning, noon and evening, in the Lutheran church, beginning at 9:30 a. m., 2 o'clock and 7:30 p. m. Exercises to consist of music, addresses, etc. All are cordially invited to be present. [2t.

There is another fraud on the road, who professes to cure all eye, ear and head diseases by means of spectacles with electric attachments, for which he charges $10, the sum of $5 to be paid at the time of purchase and the balance when the patient is cured. The spectacles are worth about twenty-five cents. Many unsophisticated people, who don't read the newspapers, have been victimized by this "spectacle game."

On Monday evening March 29th, a number of the members of the Lutheran Church, with others, notwithstanding the rain and the darkness, made quite an agreeable surprise at the residence of Rev. G. S. Batterby on third street. After spending an hour or two in friendly and social intercourse they returned to their homes, leaving substantial tokens of their kind regards; for all of which the family would return their sincere thanks.

A daughter of George Henkleman, near Lime Ridge, about 19 years of age, died very suddenly, Wednesday evening of last week. She had an attack of the measles, which did not seem to alarm any one, except that she was very sick because of their not properly appearing on the surface. Wednesday evening she retired with a sister apparently in no worse condition than previously. In the morning she was found dead in the bed. The sister sleeping with her did not know of her death until in the morning when she arose.

GEORGE A. CLARK, P. M.

The State Normal School of the 6th district at Bloomsburg, Pa., will begin the spring term on Monday, March 29th, 1886.

The attendance in the Normal department is the largest in any winter term in the history of the school. The corps of teachers will be enlarged to meet the increased attendance of the coming term. The additional building containing twenty six recitation rooms is almost under roof.

Hereafter, candidates for the new Senior class will be examined in all the preceding studies by the State Board at the time of the Senior examination, in June, and that will be the final examination in those studies. A similar examination will be held early in September for candidates unable to attend in June.

Special effort will be made during the coming term to prepare students for this examination and that of County Superintendents. Students prepared here for college are now in Amherst, Williams, Vassar Lafayette Dickinson and Lehigh University. Students having a card from the Principal may buy tickets at half-fare on the L. V., D. L. & W. and P. & R Rs. Write for further information. [m12 4t.

The Siege of Vicksburg.

The above Military Comedy was played last night before a delighted and enthusiastic audience, who made the walls of the Opera House ring by their frequent bursts of applause at every fresh comical situation and line of sparkling dialogue with which the play is teeming. While during the pathetic portions (of which there is just enough to make it intensely interesting,) they were as still as mice in the scene where the Hero, played by the author, Mr. Val. E. Love, is saved from a rebel bullet by a little silk flag concealed in his breast—a love token from his fiance. The audience were aroused to such a pitch of enthusiasm, that for fully a minute nothing could be heard, every member of the company was fully up to his or her work, and the entire performance was voted by all present, a complete success. Northumberland Press.

MORE ROOM.

MESSRS EDITORS.—I am of the opinion that the public business is the business of the public, and that the interests of the public are better protected and secured the better and more convenient the appliances are for the transaction of that business.

It is manifest that the room now occupied as a Bar Office in the Court House is entirely too small and inconvenient, and is daily becoming more so. The Bar of Columbia county comprises about forty members and the room now provided for their accommodation during the sittings of the court does not afford more than standing room. Besides that, the room is necessarily occupied by the Judge as his office, with his table, chair, case and papers, and still further contracted by the book cases which occupy three sides, and the excellent steam radiator which takes the fourth side.

The grand jury and the people of the county whose business is transacted at the Court House and in the Courts, are fully aware of the great inconvenience under which we labor. The rooms for the Bar, the Library and the Court officials ought to be added to and enlarged. To what has been said something should yet be added.

During the sitting of the Court it is the duty and the business of every member of the Bar to be in attendance. If a client comes in or a consultation is to be had between counsel there is no room to which you can retire for the purpose. The room under the gallery was prepared for, and is almost constantly and properly occupied by women in attendance as witnesses, often mothers with babes and young children, and manifestly an improper place to intrude upon. The only thing to do is to huddle together in a corner of the Court room where you disturb the court and the business.

Besides all that we are constantly buying law books, and the shelves of the Bar office are now full—yet the Supreme Court of the State is ordering them to be made at the rate of about four volumes a year, not to speak of other necessary publications to which the Court is constantly obliged to refer. Therefore book-room is also needed. There is no economy in crippling the public business, in refusing conveniences in its transaction, in making a citizen spend dollars where cents would be enough with the modern conveniences.

For instance, a few days ago I was in the Prothonotary's office of a neighboring county. Among its appliances was a telephone. A ring at the bell and an inquiry by an attorney, fifteen miles away, for judgments against A. B. or mortgages—in ten minutes answer was ready, and the business of parties went on, which else would have required a day, and several dollars of expense. And while I was there, three or four calls from different parts of the county, came and were answered. Days of time and dollars of money were thus saved to the citizen. Every thing that facilitates business is a public benefactor, every man is directly or indirectly advantaged. A false economy is really a tax upon the people.

Your Local Paper.

Ex-Senator David Davis in a recent address, has the following truths to say about the home local paper, to which we call the attention of our readers:

Every year every local paper gives from $100 to $5000 in free lines for the sole benefit of the vicinity in which it is located. No other agency can or will do this. The editor, in proportion to his means, does more for his town than any other ten men, and in all fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported; not because you may happen to like him or admire his writing, but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be brilliant nor crowded with great thoughts, but financially, it is more of a benefit to a community than the preacher or teacher. Understand us now: we don't mean morally or intellectually, but financially, and yet on the moral question you will find the majority of the local papers are on the right side of the question. To-day the editors of local papers do the most work for the least money of any men on earth.

BLOOMSBURG.

WHAT IT HAS, AND WHAT IT NEEDS.

The census of 1880 showed that the population of the Town of Bloomsburg had increased only about 300 in ten years, while that of some of our sister towns had nearly doubled. One reason for this difference may be found in the fact that the mining of iron ore about here has greatly diminished, and many miners thrown out of employment have moved away. At the same time we have had nothing to draw more people to us. There are some things that this town needs, and must have if we expect to grow in population and prosperity. First is a bridge across the river. This would open up a large section of country to us that is almost inaccessible and would give us competition in railroad traffic that would greatly benefit the town, and in fact the whole county. As this is the business and financial centre of the county, a prosperous condition of affairs is felt by every farmer, manufacturer and mechanic who comes here for a market for his produce, his manufactures and his skill. When there is plenty of money in Bloomsburg there is but little difficulty in circulating it through the country. Prices are better for grain, and wages for labor are higher. When there is stagnation here, it is felt all around us. Those therefore, who oppose the building of a bridge here are standing in their own light.

But the greatest necessity of the town is the establishment of manufacturing works that will give steady employment to a large number of working people. A large amount of money has been expended in putting the town in shape so that we can offer inducements to strangers to come here with their capital and engage in business. With a beautiful and healthful location, with all necessary railroad connections, with gas, water, steam heat and sewerage, we are, as a municipality, on a level, if indeed we are not a good way ahead of any other town in the state. There has been expended at least $100.00 by private corporations in the erection of these improvements, besides many thousands of dollars spent by the town in sewerage and in grading and beautifying the streets. While all these things were necessary, and gave employment to many laborers when in course of construction, all combined do not give steady employment to more than a dozen hands. Our business men and capitalists have exhibited a liberal spirit in every movement that has been started for the benefit of the town in what may be considered more as luxuries than as absolute necessities, and if foreign capital cannot be brought here, there is no doubt that the next movement will be for the erection of manufacturing establishments.

All the different shops, mills and furnaces combined give steady employment to about 278 hands, which are distributed as follows:

Irondale	65
Neal & Sons	42
Lockards	30
Harman & Hassert	30
S. M. Hess	6
Woolen Mill	40
Krug's Planing Mill	40
School Furnishing Co. probably	25

While in every community the majority of the population must be dependent on manual labor for their living, these figures show that only about one fifteenth of the population of this town can find steady employment in these establishments. Of this number some are non-residents, who come here only temporarily, but do not move their families here on account of the scarcity of comfortable tenement houses. There are over 800 voters in the town; there are at least 300 minors old enough to work; and yet with 1100 male inhabitants most of whom must earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, there are industries enough only to employ one third or one fourth of them, after making due allowance for all the artisans, mechanics, plasterers, painters, day laborers &c., the nature of whose trade or occupation does not permit of their working in shops in large numbers.

Bloomsburg has improved wonderfully in the past twenty years, but it has not grown. The erection of shops of some kind sufficient to give employment to 500 or 1000 hands, would bring in new people to us, and their advent would necessitate building of a large number of new houses, which would for a time furnish work for all kinds of artisans. The monthly pay roll would put in circulation large sums of money, and a period of prosperity would dawn upon us such as we have never known before.

Business will not come here of itself. It must be made by active and energetic efforts, and until we are willing to take risks always incident to the investment of large capital, we can never hope to reap greater results.

Pursuant to the call of the district Vice President, Mr. Aaron Smith, the Hemlock Sunday School Convention convened in the Lutheran church Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The attendance was exceptionally poor, lack of interest and inclement weather being the causes. The programme prepared for the occasion was a good one; full of thought and interest. The topics were ably discussed by Revs. Sharretts, Tubbs, Spear, and Bros. Richart, Beagle, A. Spear, P. Brugler and Wm. Bidleman. The President of the convention is at a loss to know how to get the people interested in this work. He is very much discouraged. The Sunday school workers of this district have not done their duty in regard to this matter.

Percival Foulk, who went to Missouri a few weeks ago, is well heard from. He speaks well of the land in Texas county, and thinks he will buy there. He says all of those who went from here there last Spring are doing well, and would be very foolish to return.

The farmers are making preparations for another Summer's operation. The merchants reap a crop every day, but the farmers consume in the winter most of what they raise in the summer. Girls, marry farmers and belong to the independent class. You never hear of strikes among farmers only when they strike for good women. You will always be blessed with (a) "piece and plenty"—of something to do. Yet laying all jokes aside, we believe it is the best you can do. Notwithstanding we counsel you to listen to no one in particular, but do the very best you can, only keep out of the hands of the profane and the inebriate. Kind and loving husbands are what you want, and no matter what their occupation may be.

DR. MOTT ON SPEER'S PORT WINE.

The celebrated Dr. Mott, of New York, speaks wonders for Mr. Speer's efforts to raise the Oporto or Port wine grape, in New Jersey. The Doctor has spent years in Portugal and the wine districts of France, and knows what he is talking about.

62 Madison Ave., New York.

MR. ALFRED SPEER,—Dear Sir: The visit I made to your vineyards, wine presses and vaults at Passaic, N. J., satisfied me that the wines produced by you are pure, and the very best that can be offered to the public for medicinal uses.

I have recommended your Port Wine and Burgundy; more particularly in my practice, I am satisfied with marked benefit to my patients.

There can be no better proof as to the wine being made of the finest Oporto grape, than a visit like I made to your acres of land covered with the vine bearing the fruit.

I remain respectively yours, Alex. B. Mott, M. D., Prof. of Surgery, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, &c.,

IMPAIRED VITALITY.—When you feel as if the vital powers were giving way, strength gone, spirits depressed, memory failing, appetite lost, exhaustion stealing over every sense and paralyzing every energy, then is the time to resort to that powerful ally of nature, Dr. Walker's vegetable vinegar bitters. It soon works a glorious renovation in the system.

Bad drainage causes much sickness. Bad blood and improper action of the liver and kidneys is bad drainage to the human system, which Burdock Blood Bitters will remedy.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,

When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,

Scrofula diseases manifest themselves in the soring. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses the blood, and removes every taint of scrofula.

"I'll attend to it soon." Don't cheat yourself in that way. Your hair is growing thinner, dryer and more lifeless every day. Save it and restore its original color, softness and gloss by using Parker's Hair Balsam awhile. [march12.

Children often need some safe Cathartic and tonic to avert approaching sickness. Simmons liver regulator will relieve colic, headache, sick stomach, indigestion dysentery and the complaints incident to childhood. The printed directions are easily followed by any one. Let the children take the regulator and keep well. It is purely vegetable, not unpleasant to the taste and safe to take either alone or in connection with other medicine, being perfectly harmless.

"You may remember I spoke to you about having been afflicted with severe headaches. Well, some time ago I began taking Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" in faint hope of relief. To my delight, and rather to my surprise, I have never had an attack since. How thankful I am I need hardly tell you. I heartily wish that all women tortured in this way knew how certain and pleasant "Favorite Remedy" is. Sarah J. Woodruff, Newburg, N. Y. [march12.

Parker's Tonic kept in a home is a sentinel to keep sickness out. Used discreetly, it keeps the blood pure, and the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. Coughs and colds vanish before it. It builds up the health. No wise mother will be without it. [mar.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Among Spring preparations, do not neglect that which is most important of all—your own body. During the Winter the blood absorbs many impurities, which, if not expelled, are liable to break out in scrofula or other disease. The best Spring medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels every impurity from the blood and gives strength to every function of the body.

"I tell you, husband, I want to try it." I had suffered for years with a complaint the physicians called gravel, and they had given up the attempt to help me. My wife heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and spoke as above. To please her I got a bottle. Used that and two or three more, and presently the trouble vanished never to return. My wife had a sort of inspiration that time.—Washington Monroe, Catskill, N. Y. Faith like hers deserves its reward. [march12.

EVA RUPERT, Treasurer for 1

An American Imprisoned and Fined for Joking in Bad German.

Some time ago a successful but somewhat impudent young man, residing in the valley of the Mississippi, married a beautiful maiden who had fled from a convent in order to share the joy and burden of life with him. It was determined that the wedding trip should comprise a tour in Europe.

The excursion across the sea and as far as Herbistal, near where Belgium borders on the confines of Rhenish Prussia, was accompanied in a piping and pleasant way.

At Herbistal the French garde gave way to a German schaffner, and when the young American was asked by the new conductor to show his ticket, he swiftly marshaled his knowledge of German, and inquired: "Sind wir in Preussen?" (Are we in Prussia?) and, receiving an affirmative answer, he said: "Aus diesem land kommon alle unsere spitzbubem her. (From this country come all of our tramps.)

Among the Germans of the Mississippi valley the word "spitzbuben" is sometimes used in the sense of tramp. In Germany it means thiet and rascal. What was more unfortunate still, the railroad on which the American was traveling was the property of the State, and the conductor wore the regulation uniform of the imperial railway service, and according to law as well as to public sentiment an insult offered to a uniformed person serving His Majesty the King in any capacity is a grave misdemeanor, punishable with fine or imprisonment, or both.

When the conductor heard the words of the American he replied with some excitement: "Ich were ihnen zeigen woe die spitzbuben sind wen wir in Aachen ankommed" (I will show you where the spitzbuben are when we arrive at Aachen). The window of the coupe went down with a crash, and the train sped on across the Prussian frontier, on over a spur of the Ardennes and twenty minutes later rolled into Aachen, the famous old kaiserstadt.

The conductor was true to his promise. As the train halted two policemen approached the coupe occupied by the bridal pair and requested the husband to step out. He indignantly refused, and was helped out. No words were wasted. No explanations were allowed. The prisoner was hurried a long the dark and narrow streets of the city, and the young bride, ignorant of the language and unable to comprehend what was transpiring, saw her hueband dragged forcibly from her, and found herself alone at night in a strange land, amidst strange faces hustled along by an officer of the law toward a second-class hotel, where she threw herself on a sota and lay prostrate for hours, dumfounded and dazed at the remarkable scene which had taken place.

About midnight a policeman came to the United States Consulate, and, arousing the Consul, relateo the incident, and handing him the prisoner's passport, intimated that the American citizen would like to have him call at the prison as early as possible the next day.

The Consul dressed himself and went to the place of imprisonment at once. He found the American in a narrow cell resting on a bed of straw. He told the story of his misfortune and begged the Consul to ascertain the whereabouts of his wife and afford her all necessary protection. The Consul left the prison and proceeded to the residence of the Chief of Police, where he presented the details of the case to that officer with the request that the American should be released, vouching at the same time for his appearance at Court the next day. The order for the release was granted, and at 3 o'clock in the morning the Western gentleman was given back to his young bride whom he found half crazed with fright and anxiety.

At 10 a. m. the next morning all parties concerned met at the office of the Police Commissioner and the Consul, fully aware of the severity of the German Courts in all cases of majestats beleidigung (insult to the crown) endeavored to effect a settlement, but without avail.

The testimony was heard. The conductor swore that the prisoner said "Alle Preussen sind spitzbuben" (All Prussians are spitzbuben). The American insisted that the coductor had misunderstood him, and that he had only intended to say in fun that "from Prussia came all of our Western tramps." Of course the grave German Court saw nothing very funny about it; and, the conductor's testimony having been taken, the prisoner was sent before the amtsgericht, where the evidence was reviewed, and from there the case went to the schoffengericht for final trial.

It usally requires days, and sometimes weeks, to dispose of such a case, but by energetic management seventeen hours after the alle ged offense had been committed the final judgement of the Court was made known. The prisoner was sentenced to pay a fine of $60, in addition to $40 in costs, and he was warned that the mild and merciful sentence was owing to his ignorance of law and the true meaning of the offensive phrase by which he had insulted a uniformed servant of His Majesty the King.

The prisoner eagerly settled the demands of the Court and started at once with his bride for the railway station. As the train moved away he opened the window of his compartment and said, in somewhat muffled tones, to the Consul: "Mum is my name until I get out of this country, but I'll watch for the frontier, and when we cross it I'll open my mouth as wide as the delta of the Mississippi and shout: 'Thank God, we are safe once more!'"—Washington Republican.

Some of the Tricks of the Stage.

FALSE NOSES AND CHANGING THE FEATURES.

Making up the face, as it is called, is an art in itself; by it the old can be made to look young, or at least younger, and the young old. By these arts the famous Dejazet, when 80 years old, could play successfully a young page. Formerly a burnt cork, a piece of chalk and a pot of rouge was all that was necessary; now your well-graced actor has his "make up" box or dressing case, containing stores of violet powder, fuller's earth, chrome yellow, blue, crayons, umber, cosmetic, black, enamel, "joining paste," with other unpleasant things. All have their purpose.

Are you a hunted villian skulking from justice in the woods? you must rub your cheeks and chin thoroughly with thick blue powder, to leave the idea that you have not been able to shave for a week. Or should you be an aged crone or hag, a few blue streaks on the arms or hands suggest the well marked veins of old age. To be particularly youthful and lover-like you must whiten your face thoroughly, rouge well up to the eyelids, and then draw a little brown streak under the eyes, which lends brilliancy. An old man has a very disagreeable task before him. He must rub his cheeks and chin well with fuller's earth; then with a camel's-hair brush proceed to make three dark streaks between the eyes, with long lines from the nostrils to the corners of the mouth, then get what is oddly called his "white bald wig," the bald portion of which is fixed to the forehead by "joining paste."

A striking additional effect is produced by giving the effect of teeth being wanting, which at first sight seems an almost impossible thing to do. But in your "make-up" you find your black enamel, with which you paint over a couple of teeth; in a few minutes it sets and hardens, and a most satisfactory and disagreeable evidence of old age is the result. A mode of attaching whiskers was the old-fashioned one of hooking them on to the ears. But there is an article called "crape hair," which is gummed on to the cheeks, and when dry can be trimmed and combed like real whiskers. As regards the nose, there is an elegant way of treatment, namely, by fitting on a well modeled paper mache one; but there is the more rough-and-ready mode of dealing with it.

We read in one of the text books on the subject the following grave directions: "In some low comedy characters, such as Bardolph, etc., it is necessary to alter the shape of the nose in order to give it that bloated, blotchy appearance so noticeable in drunkards. You must first gum on to the end of the nose a piece of wool, press it down to the shape and size required, then powder it well with rouge to match the rest of the nose and cheeks. The cheeks may also be enlarged in the same way. The other, and perhaps the better way, is to take a little powder, mix it with water and work it up into dough; fix it to the nose with spirit gum, mould it to shape and size required, and then powder it with rouge to match the cheeks, etc.

Blotches, warts and pimples may be made by sticking on small pieces of wool and coloring them either brown or red. We may thus fancy our unhappy actor complete, his woolen nose stuck on with gum, his eyebrows and whiskers well glued to him, his black enameled teeth, his cheeks plastered with rouge, white and umber, his "bald wig" fastened to his forehead with "joining paste," and we may wonder, indeed, how he can find spirit or even ease to utter his words!

Don't Shoe.

After spoiling two noble horses I was led to try driving without shoeing. Buying a three-year-old I had the smith remove the shoes which she had worn about six months, level the hoofs and rasp the edges of the shell rounding to prevent breaking up. She had an average good foot. I have driven her two years and never any horse faster nor longer drives, nor over more hard and stony roads, and her feet are still in a good condition. When standing she rests back upon the frog; never stands braced. There are many who do not drive more than two or three times a week; the remainder of the time the horse stands in a narrow stall, on the floor. Soon, to the owner's surprise "Ned" is lame; stands braced; step shortened. He is taken to another smith, who berates the former shoer, pulls off the shoes with great indignation, pares the feet, nails on some new shoes and warrants now that Ned shall travel all right. Perhaps an improvement for a few days, when the owner realizes that his horse probably is spoiled, sells at a sacrifice, buys again, etc. Now, by selecting your horses that have not been shod long (better if not at all) with good feet—an important item always—I am convinced that nine out of ten at least could be driven without shoes.

Barefooted they would escape lameness, drive better, faster and further, last much longer and keep on less food, save suffering, and shoe and treatment bills, which are no small items. The reasons are evident: 1 No restriction to the natural growth of the feet, caused by shoeing, no matter how well done. Shoeing is unnatural. 2. Letting the frog (nature's cushion) down to the ground, giving it exercise, softness, hence health to the foot; whereas the shoe elevates the foot, suspends the frog causing it to dry, become hard and dead, following which is contraction of the heel, and inflamation of the foot. 3. The frog without shoes serves as a cushion to strike upon, relieving both feet and muscles from the jar of the step; especially can your steed be driven faster down grade; the step not so high as with shoe, and but little shock to foot or muscle; for the same reason can be driven further in a day. No danger of corking, forging, stumbling etc. My experience is that with feet properly trimmed the gait is natural, easy and clear. 4. No danger—with any care whatever—of contraction by standing on the floor. As a rule, unless the drive is every day, and long at that, the feet will grow faster than they wear. So much for light drivers. But I know of a number of teams (draught horses(aways at work that were never shod.—P. Mather.

Symptoms of Dyspepsia

are loss of appetite, rising of food, heartburn, distension of the stomach, headache, bad breath, sleeplessness, low spirits and general prostration. Constipation is a frequent concomitant of dyspepsia, but sometimes it is attended with diarrhœa.

The test of many years and the experience of many thousands and tens of thousands of every age and condition of life has established the fact that no one will remain a dyspeptic who will take the purely vegetable medicine.

A Hopeless Minority.

Among the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's many accomplishments not the least is his ability as a story teller. To much amused listeners he recently told this one about a New York drummer. A typical "knight of the grip sack" was detained at a small town in Western New York awhile ago where a revival meeting was in progress. He had met a party of convival friends during his stay there, and had what is popularly known as "a load on." Nevertheless he drifted into the revival meeting and took a seat well up in front. It was rather close in the church and the warm air was conducive for sleep. The drummer yielded to the drowsy god and after nodding a little sank into a profound slumber and slept through the minister's rather long and dry discourse. The audience sang a hymn and the drummer slept on. Then the evangelist began his address, and wound up his fervid appeal with this request:

"Will all of you who want to go to heaven please rise."

Every one in the church except the sleepy drummer arose. When the evangelist asked them to be seated one of the brothers in the same pew as the sleeping drummer accidently brushed against him as he sat down. The drummer rub'ed his eyes, and partially awake heard the last portion of the evangelist's request, which was:

"Now I want all of you who want to go to hell stand up."

The drummer struggled a little, leaned forward unsteadily, and rose from his seat in a dazed sort of a way. A sort of suppressed laugh he heard from some of the younger people, and an expression of horror he noticed on the faces of some of the older ones. Steadying himself against the rail he looked at the evangelist an instant and then said:

"Well, parson, I don't know just exactly what we're voting on, but you and I seem to be in a hopeless minority."

Freightened to Death.

NEWARK, N. J., March. 25.—The daughter of Henry Richards, a farmer living between Rahway and Plainfield, near a small settlement called Oak Tree, is lying at the point of death in consequence of an effort which was made to make her reform her wayward disposition. The girl who is between 14 and 15 years of age, and quite well matured for her years, has been in the habit of going out in the evenings with some of the farmers' sons, and was disposed not to heed the counsel of her parents, who strongly opposed such actions.

A FATHER'S PLOT.

As the girl seemed determined to pursue her wild habits, a scheme was concocted by her father and uncle whereby it was believed that the girl would be taught such a lesson as would forever cure her of the proneness to wander from home after dark. So one evening a short time ago, after satisfying themselves that the girl was contemplating another meeting with her companions, her father and uncle left the house ahead of her, and, going down the country road, lay in wait for her, disguising themselves so as not to be recognized.

SEIZED AND CARRIED OFF.

They had not long to wait before they saw her coming toward them. The time was just between daylight and dark. When the girl had got opposite the place where they were in hiding they both sprang at her, and seizing her in their arms, carried her off into the bushes at the side of the road, neither of them speaking a word. The young girl had no doubt that she was in the hands of ruffians who were about to kill her. The shock was so great to her system that she was nearly literally "scared to death," and became unconscious at once.

THE PLOTTERS FRIGHTENED.

The father and his assistant then became alarmed, and carrying her home, resorted to every means to bring her to realize that it was only a joke. But the girl's mind has seemed dazed ever since, and the doctors state that she will probably never recover. Meanwhile the father and uncle are in a state of despondency at the unlooked-for outcome of their attempt to correct the evil ways of the girl. It is also reported that the young fellows with whom the girl had been in the habit of going threaten to shoot the father and uncle on sight if there should be a fatal result.

Sunday in Mexico.

A correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, writing from the city of Mexico, says: A Sunday in Mexico is one long feast of champagne, without a headache the next day. When the first streaks of dawn appear in the east people bob out from this street and that, hostelers hurry horses off to private residences, gay riders whirl by as if eager to cat
